A Difficult Matter.

There was strong family feeling in Brooklyn whenever any question affecting a member of the little community arose. The matter of Abel Wood's arrest illustrated the state of affairs.

"You see, we all knew he'd been dishonest in his dealings and that he'd ought to be put away for a spell, and the warrant was issued," said Mr. Hall, explaining to a visitor what seemed like an unnecessary delay in a simple process of the law, "but 'twas kind of hard for us to settle on the best place to arrest him."

"You see, it had got to be done either at his mother's—that's the only good woman for entry scrubbing in the place—or else at his uncle's—that's the express agent, and none too obliging even when he's feeling pleasant—or else at his brother-in-law's—that's the only man in town that's got a fust class carpenter's set-out, monkey wrench and all. Anyway, the sheriff, being his fust cousin, made it kind of awkward, now I tell you."

"Seems to me we did pretty well to get him arrested inside of a week, considering what drawbacks we had to contend with."

To Run the Gantlet.

"To run the gantlet" originated in Germany and traveled thence to England, finally becoming domesticated in America. In both the German and English armies and navies about the time of the settlement of America running the gantlet was a punishment for misdemeanor, the soldiers of a company or regiment being placed in two lines facing each other, each man armed with a switch. The culprit ran between the two files and received upon his bare back the switches of his comrades. An officer stood by to see that the punishment was properly enforced, and any soldier who failed to do his duty was himself liable to make the journey between the two files. The Indians along the coast of Virginia are said to have observed this punishment inflicted upon some sailors of an English man-of-war and immediately adopted the idea for torturing their enemies; hence came the belief that the punishment or torture was peculiar to the aborigines of North America.

Masculine Raiment.

Until the last century, in variety and magnificence, the human male followed the rule of the lower animals that the male shall predominate in brilliance. No woman has ever ruled through pure modishness. There has never been a feminine counterpart of Beau Brummel. All varieties of exquisite are male, whether dandy, macaroni or bean, and not because they are exceptions to the general rule of sobriety, but because of a superior originality and more forcible and distinguished expression. In the point of extravagance there has never been (until the last century) any difference between male and female costume. The Duke of Buckingham took twenty-seven suits of clothes to Paris in 1625, one of white uncut velvet set all over with diamonds, worth £14,000. He also wore a diamonded feather and diamond buttons and earrings. A curious fashion for men prevailed in 1612 of ornamenting the ear with strings of black velvet ribbon, also of placing a rose behind the ear.—London Saturday Review.

He Was a Man.

A Scot of Peebles said to his friend MacAndrew, "Mac, I hear ye have fallen in love wi' bonny Kate McAllister." "Weel, Sanders," Mac replied, "I was near—very near—dakin' it, but the lassie had nae siller, so I said to myself, 'Mac, be a mon.' And I was a mon, and noo I pass her by wi' silent contempt."

Two Mohammedans.

Here is a tale from O'Donovan's "Merv" illustrating the bitterness of feeling between the various sects of the followers of Mohammed: O'Donovan had offered his Mohammedan attendant, who happened to be a Shiite, some of his cold chicken, which the man took at first and chewed ruminantly. Suddenly, however, he spat the mouthful out, exclaiming, "Who cooked this?" since it is a sin for a Moslem to eat food cooked by an infidel. "Oh, it's all right," replied O'Donovan. "It was cooked by your coreligionists down there," pointing to a city of Sunnites. "What!" exclaimed the Shiite furiously. "By those infernal Sunnites? I shouldn't have minded much if it had been cooked by you or any other gnaour, but by a Sunnite! Pah!" And he spat again in his disgust. "But what is the difference between Shiite and Sunnite? Aren't both good Moslems?" "What is the difference between us? Don't you know that when a Shiite washes his hand he lets the water drip from the wrist, but when those Sunnites wash their hands they let the water drip from the elbow?"

Woman's Lot In Bavaria.

If there is any one country of civilized Europe that is away behind her sisters in her treatment of the fair sex it is Bavaria most assuredly. There all the hard work falls to the women, while men, it seems, are at best superintendents of their labor. The feminine portion of the population of this strangely unprogressive country makes its living by sawing wood, carrying mortar and bricks and even doing all the manual labor of building houses. Even the municipality itself encourages the employment of women along these lines by allowing the tramway company to hire women for cleaning out the tram rails. Indeed, in Munich especially, women seem to have replaced men in all those harder kinds of labor which are always intrusted to the stronger sex in other more progressive and civilized communities.

BUSINESS SENSE.

A Well Ordered Desk Means a Well Ordered Mind.

"There's one piece of advice," said the senior partner, "that I'd like to give every young man taking a business position with a desk attached to it. It's this: Keep your desk clean. What I mean by having a desk clean is keeping everything possible off it except that which is related to the matter in hand. I've observed in my time a good many men in their offices, and I can say that with very few exceptions the real men of affairs are those who are free from clutter."

"With a lot of papers in front of you it's almost a certainty that some hour in the day you're going to be flustered, and very likely it will be just when you want a clear head. The old idea that a mass of material every which way on the desk is a sign that a person is full of business is pretty well worn. Such a collection not only indicates a lack of order, but also is a sign that nervousness may be expected from the man in the chair. What with filing cabinets and other devices no excuse can be offered nowadays for confusion. "A well ordered desk means a well ordered mind, a mind taking up one thing at a time and giving it the proper attention. It denotes regularity and concentrated, effective effort."—New York Press.

"DO IT TO-DAY!"

"And to think that ten months ago I looked like this! I owe it to German Syrup."

"The time-worn injunction, 'Never put off 'til to-morrow what you can do to-day,' is now generally presented in this form: 'Do it to-day!'" That is the terse advice we want to give you about that hacking cough or demoralizing cold with which you have been struggling for several days, perhaps weeks. Take some reliable remedy for it TO-DAY—and let that remedy be Dr. Boschee's German Syrup, which has been in use for over thirty-five years. A few doses of it will undoubtedly relieve your cough or cold, and its continued use for a few days will cure you completely. No matter how deep-seated your cough, even if dreading consumption has attacked your lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble.
